

Furniture Manufacturing in China

Who is this tour for	There are about 80,000 furniture factories in China, employing over 15 million people.
How it happens	Furniture manufacturers in China are mainly concentrated in the south and east, as well as in the northern and northeastern regions of the country. More specifically, the main production centers are in the provinces of Zhejiang, Guangdong, Jiangsu, and Shanghai. Of the total production, about 35% is made of wood, 50% is made of metal, and 15% is made of soft materials.
Q & A
Cost of services >
Delivery, customs >
All about furniture from China v
Guangzhou Shopping malls and Markets	Production and Furniture Centers in the Southern Region of China
Furniture Manufacturing in China	The largest furniture manufacturers are located in southern China, with the main production bases in Guangdong and Fujian provinces.
Shunde (about 3,000 factories)	In monetary terms, the volume of furniture production in Guangdong Province reaches 30%, and the export of furniture reaches 40% of China's annual output. Currently, there are approximately 10,000 furniture factories in Guangdong. The main furniture manufacturing enterprises are located in the Pearl River Delta (Zhujiang) production zone.
Where is the best place to buy furniture in China?	China Furniture Center
	The suburb of Foshan city Letsun is rightfully considered the main furniture center not only in China , but also throughout the world, for which in business circles it is called the city of furniture and furniture center. There are about 1000 furniture factories and more than 3500 representative offices of manufacturers of various types of furniture. And also about 180 large shopping centers specializing exclusively in all kinds of furniture. The total area of the shopping pavilions exceeds 3.2 million square meters. The number of furniture items for various purposes is about 20,000. About 30,000 potential customers visit the furniture shopping centers every day.
	Fujian Province is also one of the largest furniture-producing areas in China. There are over 3,000 furniture factories and plants in the province. The coastal part of the province is home to manufacturers of furniture for homes, kitchens, offices, schools, hotels, as well as upholstered and antique furniture. The inland and mountainous areas are home to manufacturers of wooden, wicker, and wrought iron furniture, as well as bamboo and rattan products.
	Production and Furniture Centers in the Eastern Region of China
	This area includes the city of Shanghai and the provinces of Jiangsu and Zhejiang. It produces 25% of all Chinese furniture and exports 40%. Well-known brands include Huaweimei and Xilinmen.

Shanghai is one of the largest furniture "sellers" in China. The total area of furniture shopping malls in the city is more than 2.8 million square meters.

Jiangsu Province produces 10% of China's total furniture output. Notable cities include Nantong, Yancheng, and Lianyungang, which specialize in wooden furniture, Changzhou, which produces wooden and steel furniture, Suzhou, which produces mahogany furniture, and Nanjing, which produces kitchen furniture.

Zhejiang Province is the second largest furniture-producing province in China (after Guangdong). There are 3,000 furniture enterprises in this province. The main production bases of the province include the following cities: Hangzhou for office and upholstered furniture, Taizhou for classic European-style furniture, Huzhou for office chairs, Yiwu for mahogany furniture, Shaoxing for mattresses, Haining for leather sofas, and Ningbo for kitchen cabinets and bar counters.

Manufacturing and Furniture Centers in the Northern Region of China

This region, centered on Beijing, includes the provinces of Shandong, Hebei, and the central city of Tianjin. . There are 7,500 furniture factories here, employing 1.2 million people. Local enterprises mainly produce antique furniture, following the traditions of the Ming and Qing dynasties. Brands such as Tiantan, Qumei, Lanniao, and Huari are widely known in the north.

Production and furniture centers in the Northeastern region of China (Heilongjiang, Jilin, and Liaoning provinces)

The total production in this area accounts for 5% of the total output of furniture in China. This geographical area has abundant forest resources, which is why it is primarily known for producing wooden furniture. Well-known local brands include Huafeng, Huahe, and Guangming.

Production and Furniture Centers in the Western Region of China

The main centers of furniture production are the cities of Chengdu and Xi'an, which are emerging manufacturing bases. Their development is driven by high demand and, consequently, large consumption of furniture products in these cities. Popular local brands such as Meishi, Quanyou, Zhongshan, Nanfang, and Mingzhu have already emerged in these cities.